

Phrasal Verb Get

Summary of the video lesson. Learn more on Powerinsight.ru!

Get is also one of the most frequently used verbs.

To say that you are awake, you can use got up.
“Once, on an early Saturday morning, you got up”.

You need to call a friend on the phone, but you could hardly reach him, or you remembered that you need to call a friend on the phone, but you could hardly get through to him.

If you're on good terms with someone, say it with get along:
“You get along pretty well with a friend”.

Use get across when, for example, you are calling a friend to discuss a further action plan

“You wanted to get him across the further action plan”.

You left the house use get out of:

“You got out of your apartment”.

You boarded a transport or “You got on the bus”.

When you came back or got back - you left the transport or

“You got off the bus”.

When you got to your house and discovered that it looked like someone had broken in, use get into:

“Someone's got into your house”.

After the robbery, the thief left the house or

“After the robbery the thief got away”.

You suspected a local man who was poor or

“You immediately suspected a local man who was barely getting by”.

Then we can use get away to say

“Whoever it was, he's not going to get away with it”.

Cards and interactive tests are also available on this topic.

Free, on Powerinsight.ru!

(No registration required, limited offer)